SAN FRANCISCO, August 22 - Matrix Logic Corp (<http://www.matrix-logic.com>), a long-time Open Text partner and integrator of Enterprise Content Management (ECM) solutions for law firms, corporate legal departments, government agencies and private businesses, has released a wireless eDOCS DM Client for the BlackBerry PlayBook.

The WirelessDMS PlayBook Client is included in Matrix Logic's WirelessDMS Suite portfolio that is also known as the Open Text WirelessDMS for eDOCS by Matrix Logic. The PlayBook client will be available as a downloadable app from RIM's BlackBerry App World. With the purchase of the corresponding WirelessDMS server component PlayBook users can now access content from their corporate eDOCS DM repositories.

The WirelessDMS suite by Matrix Logic now consists of the following modules:

- PlayBook Client
- BlackBerry Client
- iPad Client
- iPhone Client
- Microbrowser Module (for eDOCS DM access using mobile devices via a micro-browser)
- EmailService Module (functional eDOCS DM access via email)
- MobileSync Module (mobile eDOCS DM client)

"As a BlackBerry Developer and a pioneer in document management solutions, Matrix Logic understands the demand for a WDMS PlayBook solution for the legal market. Law firms were the first to adopt BlackBerry as the preferred method for wireless email and document access. Since its release in 2009, there has been strong demand for the BlackBerry WDMS client from the Legal Sector. Matrix Logic has anticipated the logical next steps of this large RIM customer base and the impact that the PlayBook client will have as Law Firms continue to expand their BlackBerry and BES wireless solutions. We are pleased to bring an eDOCS DM wireless solution for the PlayBook to market to fulfill the requests made by our legal customers" said Mark Vilinskas, VP of Partner Programs at Matrix Logic. "Open Text eDOCS DM customers can now greatly enhance and leverage their investment in eDOCS DM solutions by providing PlayBook access to DM repositories."
